

Alessandro Fogar

A short bio

Alessandro Fogar, born 1962, scientific studies, is an electronic musician and multimedia / software designer, he is based in Grado (Go), Italy

He studied interactive techniques and new media technologies, Conservatorio G. Tartini, Trieste with Roberto Doati, Paolo Pachini, Nicola Buso and others where he undergraduated in electronic music.

He attended some workshops about computer music (CSC Padova and Gorizia), soundscapes and sound diffusion (Barry Truax – Berlin), interactive and feedback techniques, (Agostino di Scipio, Trieste) soundscapes (Albert Mayr – Villacaccia di Lestizza), composition (Pierre Marietan, Villacaccia di Lestizza), spatialization (Ircam, Berlin), performance practice (Akio Suzuki – Villacaccia di Lestizza) and others.

Since 1988 he has explored various approaches to sound generation, recording and production, the resulting compositions are often studies in transforming, mutating existing sounds.

Sound works

He builds his electronic music from natural sounds and synthetic instruments.

He operates in the field of electronic music and multimedia art, with a marked interest in natural sounds, spatialization and interactive systems.

He and his computer operates the musical equipment in performances and installations that are as interesting to watch as to hear.

His musical search is put into effect mainly in the search of an integration between human and nature.

The techniques range from the construction of original instruments and the capturing of acoustic phenomenon through environmental field recordings to digital multi-tracking and sound manipulation.
